AREA EMPLOYERS

In addition to tourism, agriculture, furniture and yacht manufacturing, Michigan's life sciences industry is a vital part of the economy. Michigan's Life Sciences Corridor supports leading edge research connecting four prestigious institutions — Michigan State University, University of Michigan, Wayne State University and Van Andel Research Institute in Grand Rapids — and is among the nation's most important in the development of biotechnology applications.

HOSPITAL

Benchmark patient and staff satisfaction rates, medical excellence, innovation and Holland Hospital's Magnet™ designation demonstrate their commitment to patient care excellence. Their recently expanded main campus includes a new ICU and Level II perinatal nursery, an expanded ED with 43 high-tech treatment rooms and a 12-bed psychiatric unit. Holland Hospital continues to broaden its scope in cardiology, neurosciences, medical imaging, nephrology and interventional services—all with a focus on quality.

MEDICAL STAFF

Holland Hospital's medical staff of nearly 300 physicians represents over 34 specialties. The medical staff and administration work together in a positive and collaborative atmosphere. Their physicians regularly share positive comments;

"I love the environment at Holland Hospital. Prior to coming to Holland, I worked in hospitals in Detroit, Chicago and New York City, and here, the layers that sometimes separate the physicians from the patients are gone. As a cardiologist in this smaller hospital setting, I maintain close patient contact which is very enjoyable for me." – William Frauenheim, M.D., Cardiology

"Holland Hospital has the right combination of size and opportunity. It's a hospital committed to providing quality health care. The medical staff is absolutely first rate. The administration is dedicated to maintaining high standards, improving quality and making this a great place to practice." – Ken Kuper, M.D., Emergency Physician.
